Online PR News – 20-March-2013 –Beverly Hills, CA - "Doctors have been doing eyelid surgery the wrong way for the last 40 years," says plastic surgeon Dr. Richard Ellenbogen. "The most youth restorative procedure in my opinion is to fill in deep upper eyelids. This technique of carefully placing fat to restore or create attractive contours is not generally practiced, but it should be," he says. "Just consider the most beautiful actresses and models who grace the covers of top magazines. Virtually every one of these women, regardless of age or ethnicity have fullness in the areas between the upper eyelids and the brows. See photos of Mila Kunis, Anne Hathaway, Halle Berry, Megan Fox and Natalie Portman to name just a few contemporary actresses. Or consider classic film goddesses like Marilyn Monroe and Kim Novak. All have this facial trait. This is considered a characteristic of beauty and youth that makes a woman look more attractive and alluring, and it's a trait which has been incredibly consistent among beautiful actresses from the Golden Age of Hollywood to today," says Dr. Ellenbogen.
